The app and website include a questionnaire and information about the coronavirus – Apple will not be collecting or storing users answers to the questionnaire, though it will collect anonymous information about usage of the tool. The screening tool does not require an Apple account.

3.) COVID 19 Frequently Asked Questions

1. What is Coronavirus?

Coronaviruses are a type of virus. There are many different kinds, and some cause disease. A newly identified type has caused a recent outbreak of respiratory illness now called COVID-19.

2. How is COVID-19 Spread?

COVID-19 can be passed from person to person through droplets from coughs and sneezes. The spread of this new coronavirus is being monitored by the Centers for Disease Control (CDC), the World Health Organization and health organizations like Johns Hopkins across the globe.

3. How is this new Coronavirus spread to humans?

COVID-19 appeared in Wuhan, a city in China, in December 2019. Although health officials are still tracing the exact source of this new coronavirus, early hypotheses thought it may be linked to a seafood market in Wuhan, China. Some people who visited the market developed viral pneumonia caused by the new coronavirus. A study that came out on Jan. 25, 2020, notes that the individual with the first reported case became ill on Dec. 1, 2019, and had no link to the seafood market. Investigations are ongoing as to how this virus originated and spread.

4. What is the incubation period for COVID-19?

It appears that symptoms are showing up in people within 14 days of exposure to the virus.

5. What are the symptoms of COVID-19? COVID-19 symptoms include:

☐ Cough, ☐ Fever, ☐ Shortness of breath

In rare cases, COVID-19 can lead to severe respiratory problems, kidney failure or death. If you have a fever or any kind of respiratory difficulty such as coughing or shortness of breath, call your doctor or a health care provider and explain your symptoms over the phone before going to the doctor's office, urgent care facility or emergency room. Source: John Hopkins Medicine Here are suggestions if you feel sick and are concerned you might have COVID-19. If you have a medical emergency such as severe shortness of breath, call 911 and let them know about your symptoms.

6. How is COVID-19 diagnosed?

Diagnosis may be difficult with only a physical exam because mild cases of COVID-19 may appear similar to the flu or a bad cold. A laboratory test can confirm the diagnosis.

7. How is COVID-19 treated?

As of now, there is not a specific treatment for the virus. People who become sick from COVID-19 should be treated with supportive measures: those that relieve symptoms. For severe cases, there may be additional options for treatment, including research drugs and therapeutics.

8. Does COVID-19 cause death?

As of Apr. 1, 2020, 43,288 deaths have been attributed to COVID-19. However, 184,771 people have recovered from the illness. This information comes from the Coronavirus COVID-19 Global Cases map developed by the Johns Hopkins Center for Systems Science and Engineering.

9. Is this coronavirus different from SARS?

SARS stands for severe acute respiratory syndrome. In 2003, an outbreak of SARS started in China and spread to other countries before ending in 2004. The virus that causes COVID-19 is similar to the one that caused the 2003 SARS outbreak: both are types of coronaviruses. Much is still unknown, but COVID-19 seems to spread faster than the 2003 SARS and also may cause less severe illness.

10. How do you protect yourself from this coronavirus?

It's crucial to practice good hygiene, respiratory etiquette and social distancing. Source: John Hopkins Medicine

4.) How long can the virus that causes COVID-19 live on surfaces?

1. How worried should we be about our risk of becoming infected simply by touching something an infected person was in contact with days ago?

What's getting a lot of press and is presented out of context is that the virus can last on plastic for 72 hours. But what's more important is the amount of the virus that remains. It's less than 0.1% of the starting virus material. Infection is theoretically possible but unlikely at the levels remaining after a few days. While the New England Journal of Medicine study found that the COVID virus can be detected in the air for 3 hours, in nature, respiratory droplets sink to the ground faster than the aerosols produced in this study. The experimental aerosols used in labs are smaller than what comes out of a cough or sneeze, so they remain in the air at face-level longer than heavier particles would in nature.

2. What is the best way I can protect myself, knowing that the virus that causes COVID-19 lives on surfaces?

You are more likely to catch the infection through the air if you are next to someone infected than off a surface. Cleaning surfaces with disinfectant or soap is very effective because once the oily surface coat of the virus is disabled, there is no way the virus can infect a host cell. However, there cannot be an overabundance of caution. Nothing like this has ever happened before. The CDC guidelines on how to protect yourself include: □ Clean and disinfect surfaces that many people come in contact with. These include tables, doorknobs, light switches, countertops, handles, desks, phones, keyboards, toilets, faucets, and sinks. Avoid touching high-contact surfaces in public. □ Wash your hands often with soap and water for at least 20 seconds immediately when you return home from a public place such as the bank or grocery store. □ When in a public space, put a distance of six feet between yourself and others. □ Most importantly, stay home if you are sick and contact your doctor. There has been speculation that once the summer season arrives and the weather warms up, the virus won't survive, but we don't yet know if that is true.

3. Does the weather or indoor temperature affect the survival of the COVID-19 virus on surfaces?

There is no evidence one way or the other. The virus's viability in exposure to heat or cold has not been studied. But it does bear pointing out that the New England Journal of Medicine study was performed at about room temperature, 21-23 degrees Celsius.

4. How does the virus that causes COVID-19 compare with other coronaviruses, and why are we seeing so many more cases?

SARS-CoV-2 behaves like a typical respiratory coronavirus in the basic mechanisms of infection and replication. But several mutations allow it to bind tighter to its host receptor and increase its transmissibility, which is thought to make it more infectious. The New England Journal of Medicine study suggests that the stability of SARS-CoV-2 is very similar to that of SARS-CoV1, the virus that caused the 2002-2003 SARS global outbreak. But, researchers believe people can carry high viral loads of the SARS-CoV-2 in the upper respiratory tract without recognizing any symptoms, allowing them to shed and transmit the virus while asymptomatic.

5.) How families and roommates can effectively self-quarantine, self-isolate

As a result of the widespread and rapid contagious rate of the novel coronavirus (COVID-19) we have been asked to stay safe at home, while practicing social distancing when out getting essential goods (food, medicine, etc.). Some of us are faced with the reality that members of our household have been label as essential personnel (doctors, nurses, cashiers, janitors, delivery workers, etc.) which continue to attend their place of work and interact with other to keep the most essential services up and running during this challenging times. The researchers at John Hopkins University have developed this FAQ regarding how families and roommates can effectively self-quarantine, self-isolate if the need presents itself.

Here are the recommendations:

1. What is the difference between self-quarantine, self-isolation, and social distancing?

Self-quarantine is staying in place, either at home or elsewhere, for fourteen days because you have been exposed to someone who has tested positive for COVID-19. Self-isolation would be isolating within the house after you start showing symptoms of COVID-19. Social distancing is a response in which people remain home and distant from others (such as by refraining from shaking hands or hugging or going to the store at off hours), without any known exposure to the virus, to limit possible transmission to or from others.

2. What are the signs or symptoms that someone should self-isolate? When can the self-isolation end?

If you do develop symptoms, like a fever, cough, or shortness of breath, that is when you would need to self-isolate at home, away from other household members. If you develop these symptoms, contact your medical provider but stay home as long as those symptoms are manageable (like you would for a normal cold or flu). If you have severe shortness of breath or if symptoms suddenly get worse, that is when you should seek out medical care. According to CDC guidelines, individuals with COVID-19 symptoms should self-isolate until their symptoms have resolved and it has been at least seven additional days since symptoms first appeared to ensure they are no longer contagious.

3. What is the safest way to self-isolate one person within a larger household?

If you can have a separate space for the sick person—a space where they can access the restroom without traveling through commons spaces—that would be best. Those who are caring for loved ones who are sick at home should wash their hands frequently, avoid close contact as much as possible, and have the sick individual wear a surgical or procedure mask to prevent droplets spreading through the air. It is also important to clean frequent- or high-touch surfaces, as well to clean clothes in very hot water. Caregivers should also wear a mask.

4. In households that are not able to accommodate these suggestions, what else can be done to limit transmission at home?

If you're not a caregiver, maintaining six feet of distance and washing your hands frequently are the main steps, along with cleaning surfaces often. If you are a caregiver, it's certainly tougher. You should wear a mask if possible and follow the other guidelines of handwashing and cleaning clothes and surfaces frequently.

5. How can parents and other caregivers help children and dependents who are unable to follow the recommended advice (like washing hands and not touching your face), particularly if they need to be self-isolated?

It's very hard to stay away from kids, especially when they're ill and need care and comfort. If possible, main caregivers should be those who are not at high risk from COVID-19, meaning those not over age sixty or with underlying health issues. Other than that, it's important to take the normal precautions in terms of handwashing and cleaning, but it is much more difficult with children.

6. How much can caregivers rely on childcare alternatives (relatives, neighbors, babysitters) in this moment?

In general, it's important to keep the circle smaller. At the moment, not exposing yourself to many additional people is best. Healthcare workers, people with critical jobs, and hourly employees who have to work will need to rely on childcare providers. In those situations, you may ask someone you know and trust, and who is reliable in taking the social distancing rules seriously. If possible, childcare providers should not be in a group that's at high-risk for COVID.

7. What supplies should be on hand, for both self-quarantine and self-isolation?

For self-quarantine you should have your basic supplies like food and thirty days of any medications being taken. If you should become sick, and in anticipation of becoming sick, you should have supplies like Gatorade—something to rehydrate—as well as cough medicine to manage symptoms, and Tylenol to assist with the fever.

Also, Lisa Maragakis, M.D., M.P.H., Senior Director of Infection Prevention at John Hopkins University provides the following clarification about what is true or false about COVID-19:

TRUE or FALSE?

A vaccine to cure COVID-19 is available.

The answer is false. There is no vaccine for the new coronavirus right now. Scientists have already begun working on one but developing a vaccine that is safe and effective in human beings will take many months.

TRUE or FALSE?

You can protect yourself from COVID-19 by swallowing or gargling with bleach, taking acetic acid or steroids, or using essential oils, salt water, ethanol or other substances.

The answer is false. None of these recommendations protects you from getting COVID-19, and some of these practices may be dangerous. The best ways to protect yourself from this coronavirus (and other viruses) include: Washing your hands frequently and thoroughly, using soap and hot water. Avoiding close contact with people who are sick, sneezing or coughing. In addition, you can avoid spreading your own germs by coughing into the crook of your elbow and staying home when you are sick.

TRUE or FALSE?

A face mask will protect you from COVID-19.

The answer is false. Certain models of professional, tight-fitting respirators (such as the N95) can protect health care workers as they care for infected patients. For the general public without respiratory illness, wearing lightweight disposable surgical masks is not recommended. Because they don't fit tightly, they may allow tiny infected droplets to get into the nose, mouth or eyes. Also, people with the virus on their hands who touch their face under a mask might become infected. People with a respiratory illness can wear these masks to lessen their chance of infecting others. Bear in mind that stocking up on masks makes fewer available for sick patients and health care workers who need them.
